W.H.Aldred Says 'Watch Statesboro Climb in '49'

President Walter Aldred, who took over the helm of the Statesboro Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday, is all pepped up over activity in Statesboro in 1949 and has already launched a program for the organization for the new year.

Businessmen Asked To Keep Night Light Burning in Businesses

Chief of Police Bill Lott is asking businessmen in the city to leave a small light burning in each place of business at night.

He points out that this is a safety precaution to help members of the city police as they make their nightly rounds checking front and back doors to make sure they are closed and locked. "A light somewhere in the building will help the police determine if all is well," he said.

He also asks that a small card be posted in the front door giving the building owner's name, address, and phone number, so that some member of the firm might be called in case of an emergency. He would like also for this information to be mailed to his office as a permanent file.

"This information is for the protection of our business places," he said.

Director Reports On Recreation

In the third of a series of "Know Your City and County" programs, the Statesboro Rotary Club on Monday heard Max Lockwood, director of the Statesboro Recreation Department, make a report of the first year's progress.

Beginning with the organization of the department last April, Mr. Lockwood reviewed the work done with the young people here. The city council provides the director's salary and the civic organizations of the city accepted the responsibility of the program.

Since its establishment the program has provided recreation for more than 2,400 young people monthly, according to Mr. Lockwood.

The program is set up on a year-round basis, with the winter months the least active because of inadequate indoor recreational facilities.

The outdoor programs include football, baseball and basketball. "The Community Center (formerly the Woman's Club building) is open six days a week with Saturday devoted principally to the rural children who come to Statesboro," Mr. Lockwood said.

"Our activities include Girl Scouts and the Brownies, a pre-school nursery program, area community clubs, the Knot Hole Club, the American Legion baseball team—all in addition to the football, baseball and basketball activities," he added.

The department works with the East Side Community Club which provides recreational facilities for the youth and adults in that section. Mr. Lockwood stated that they are planning clubs in every area of the city.

"Right now we need badly a 60- by 100-foot concrete surface outdoors to provide for basketball courts, tennis courts, badminton, shuffleboard, and a score of other games," he added. He pointed out that where recreation is so concentrated it is easier to supervise.

He stated that the program has earned state-wide recognition.

Red Caps Win Legion Trophy

The Red Caps, powerful football team of the City Junior League, defeated the Cardinals 13 to 6 on New Year's Day in the first Turpentine Bowl game to win the American Legion trophy and the league championship.

Red Cap Robert Waters, playing halfback, scored in the first period with Jimmy Jones adding the extra point over the line. The underdog Cardinals scored in the second frame when Gene Newton passed 15 yards to L. M. Nessmith who had moved into the end zone to receive the ball and score. The try for the extra point failed and the score at the half was 7 to 6 in favor of the Red Caps.

In the third quarter scat-back Jimmy Jones of the Red Caps hit pay dirt and ran the score up to 13 points. The try for extra point failed and the game ended 13 to 6, with the Red Caps as league champions.

The winners were champions for the entire season. Their position at the top of the league was never seriously challenged.

In the playoff the Red Caps ran into trouble and, with only one point to spare, nosed out the second place Bull Dogs to win the right to play in the finals for the American Legion trophy on New Year's Day.

Ceremonies at which the trophy will be awarded is to be arranged later.

"DOTTIE HARGROVE"

Beg Pardon, Please, And Thank You Very Much

When our school holidays began on the 18th of December, we packed our jeep full and headed for Waycross to visit El's brother, Zeb, and his family.

Since we last saw them, there has been an addition to the family—little girl named Sandra, who was three weeks old when we got there, so we had a good time watching the children. Their other offspring, John, is a real boy, four months younger than our Beth—and the two of them sized each other up for about half an hour before they started fighting over the toys.

After we had the young 'uns tucked in that first night, we ate spaghetti. Olga is a genius with that dish because she knows how to use garlic. She even mixed butter in a bowl which she rubbed with garlic and the poppy seeds were wonderful with it.

After the meal, none of us felt right enough for bridge, so we sat around and talked and, somehow, we got on the subject of politeness in our present day world.

Shopping for Christmas had a tiring ordeal for all of us, and it had been made unpleasant at times because of inconsiderate and discourteous salespeople.

El had gotten the idea that women take men's civility too much for granted. He said he doesn't mind opening doors for them, but he likes to be thanked—and he gets peeved as all get-out when a woman nonchalantly wheels a buggy full of groceries into the checking line when she should "go foot" and wait her turn like everyone else.

Olga's good disposition had been dealt a terrible blow by a clerk in the food store. She went in, all smiles, one day to get three 3's and "the idiot" back of the bars made her stand there while he sorted some mail and then gave her one 3 and seven cents change.

She told him again that she wanted three 3's and he grudgingly pulled out two more stamps.
